About the Authors:

Duke Rohe has been involved in health care improvement for thirty years. He is an industrial engineer by degree and a creator by nature. Duke is a Fellow member of the Healthcare Information Management Systems Society and has received its Total Quality Management Award and its Outstanding Fellow Service Award. He authored the chapter “Instigating Change and Engaging Teams” in the society’s Management Engineering Handbook. Duke is currently a systems improvement specialist at M. D. Anderson Cancer Center in the Texas Medical Center (Houston). He considers himself the improvement geek for accelerated change at the hospital. His creation of improvement tools began as a commitment to generate a tool a week and share it with change masters in his organization. He expanded distribution of his tools outside the organization by developing two web sites: <http://www.himssct.org/tools/tools.html> and <http://shs.iienet.org>. Several of his more popular tools have been formalized for inclusion in this book.

Patrice L. Spath is a health information management professional with extensive experience in performance management activities. During the past 25 years Patrice has presented over 350 training programs on quality improvement, utilization management, patient safety, and outcomes management topics. Patrice has authored several books for her own publishing company, Brown-Spath & Associates, and for other publishers such as the American Hospital Association, Health Administration Press, and OR Manager, Inc. Patrice writes the monthly "Quality-Cost Connection" column for Hospital Peer Review and serves as a quarterly guest columnist for Hospital Case Management.
